FitLore: 100 Video Ideas

Animated fitness stories for ordinary people building habits that fit real life.

The formula for every episode

1. 0-3 sec: show the problem or a bold claim (no slow intro).
2. Relatable struggle: the viewer thinks "that's me."
3. Friction: something goes wrong (pain, time, temptation).
4. Insight: one clear, source-backed idea.
5. Small win: a takeaway the viewer can try today.
6. Comment hook: end with one easy question.

Rules to keep it viral and credible

- Marcus's experiments are illustrative stories. Say so in the opening and description, and never present them as real results.
- Put the topic in the title. Skip generic meme hashtags.
- Use the old meme strength (recognition) inside fitness situations.
- Test the first 12 episodes as one series before judging the niche.
- Cite a source in the description for any science claim, and separate association from causation.

Quick packaging tips

- Title pattern: [Character] + [specific challenge] + [curiosity gap].
- Add a series tag in the title or description (e.g., "Marcus Experiments EP 3") to build return viewers.
- End most episodes with: "Which one is your hardest? Comment below."

- Review retention in YouTube Studio after every 4 uploads and double down on the series that holds viewers.
